African Day at my School
Peter Msaka
Japhet Katuma

Every year, we celebrate African Day at my school. This year we celebrate this day tomorrow.

My friends and I have prepared to showcase African male attire.

I took my friends to the number one tailor in town.

We call him Malume, which means uncle.

Majoni will wear the Eswatini Lihiya.

It is a mix of bright colours.

We are all proud of our different African attires.

Malume knows all the styles of African men's attire.

We are all happy that he satisfied our needs.

He has made me a Malawian Khalidwe wear.

It is a cream white shirt with patterns and a matching pair of shorts.

Siyeni has settled for a light blue Kenyan Safari suit.

He will look very official.

Pilirani will be looking taller in Senegalese Kaftan.

It is an orange suit with blue patterns.

My friend Sekani, will wear the popular African Dashiki.

It is blue with multicoloured embroidery.

Yamikani will go simple in the East African Kitenge.

It has orange and green checkered patterns.

Mayeso will showcase the West African Agbada.

His is yellow with green square patterns in the front.
