You are free to download, copy, translate or adapt this story and use the illustrations as long as you attribute in the following way:

Atieno's friend

Author - Aisha Nelson
Adaptation - Ursula Nafula
Illustration - Idowu Abayomi Oluwasegun
Language - English
Level - First paragraphs

© African Storybook Initiative 2018 Creative Commons: Attribution 4.0 Source www.africanstorybook.org

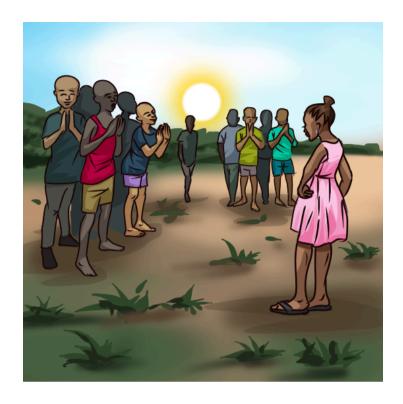

Atieno's friend
Ursula Nafula
Idowu Abayomi Oluwasegun

Atieno could not believe that the sun was back in the village. But most of all, the sun was back in her life.

She told the children, "My friend, the sun is back!"

There was a village near a lake.

There lived a young girl. Her name was Atieno.

12

Atieno's father was a famous fisherman. He had his own little fishing canoe.

Atieno enjoyed going fishing with her father.

Suddenly, the thick clouds cleared. The sun appeared. Life returned to the village once again.

Everybody prepared to do what they always did.

2

Everybody stared up. The ball disappeared into the thick clouds.

There was total silence.

Atieno loved to watch the boys play football.

"Let me play with you," she begged them one day.

The boys laughed at her, "Go and play hide and seek with girls."

Girls said to Atieno, "Your legs are too long." Atieno was sad.

Each morning, Atieno danced alone with the sun.

The sun became her friend.

Atieno put the ball on the ground. She thought, "I can play just like those boys."

She kicked the ball hard. It went up and up into the cloudy sky.

Atieno thought, "I will play with this ball until my friend, the sun returns."

She picked up the ball and ran out with it.

One day, the sun did not rise. Cocks did not crow. Birds did not sing. Children did not go to school. Even her father did not go fishing.

Atieno was sad. "Where is my friend, the sun? Why is it so dark today?"

8

Atieno told the other children how sad she was. But they laughed at her, "Perhaps your friend the sun, is dead. Or perhaps it ran away from you."

Atieno said, "The sun is my friend. It cannot die."

Atieno was so sad that she ran to the house.

She kicked her brother's ball very hard.